

KDES student Stacey Abraham gets a victory hug from KDES games coordinator Phyllis Ballenger after competing in the 21st Special Olympics summer games, held at Gallaudet May 19 and 20. Close to 900 athletes, 600 volunteers, and 1,500 spectators attended the event.

Board's policy changes include leave, confidential information

At its May meeting, the Gallaudet Board of Trustees approved University policy revisions on dissemination of confidential information, military leave, policies and procedures, use of facilities by outside organizations, and compensation programs.

The revision dealing with confidential information allows access by certain outside sources to materials citing the general reason for a former employee's separation from employment at the University. In the past, the University did not reveal conditions of separation.

Queries by "appropriate sources," such as the Department of Unemployment Compensation, law enforcement officials, or prospective employers, about circumstances concerning termination of employment may be answered as "resigned [including retired], laid off, terminated for poor performance, or terminated for gross misconduct." Also added is the statement, "Inappropriate disclosure of confidential information [by any University employee] could lead to termination."

The policy change in the area of military leave states that, in compliance with the U.S. Code, time away from work for National Guard or Armed Forces training, beyond the 15 days currently allowed by the University's policy, must be granted as leave without pay or annual leave.

The use of facilities by outside organizations policy has been revised for clarification, and insurance requirements for facilities users are also more clearly defined.

The policy on compensation programs has been deleted because compensation is covered in other University documents and policies.

In addition, a statement has been added to the policy stating that the Administrations and Operations Manual is not a contract of employment, and minor changes in procedures no longer require board approval.

Gallaudet to share in Fitness Day

Gallaudet employees and students are encouraged to participate in a number of noncompetitive physical exercises June 14 when the University celebrates the first National Employee Health and Fitness Day.

From 11:30 a.m.-1:30 p.m. at Hotchkiss Field, the Gallaudet Community will have the opportunity to join in activities such as aerobics, body conditioning, and yoga. They can also ride a lifecycle, talk with a kung fu pro and a nutritionist, and watch demonstrations with weights and dynabands. All events are free, with the exception of cholesterol testing, which will be conducted by a representative from Capitol Hill Hospital for $5.

The tentative schedule for classes is: 11:45 a.m.-12:30 p.m., "Fat Burner"; 12:30 p.m.-1:15 p.m., body conditioning; and noon to 1 p.m., yoga. A walking class using weights will begin at noon also. (Participants should bring a towel or mat for the conditioning class, and free weights for the walking class.)

National Employee Health and Fitness Day is being sponsored here by the Department of Physical Education and Recreation and the Department of Administrative and Community Services. For more information, call x5591.

Crowds share in excitement at 21st Special Olympics summer games

"Join the World of Winners" was the theme for the 21st annual summer games of the Special Olympics, held at Gallaudet's Hotchkiss Field May 19 and 20.

Judging by the unprecedented number of supporters, the theme was taken to heart. According to Tonya Edmunds of the District chapter of Special Olympics, the 1,500 fans and 600 volunteers who came out to cheer the mentally retarded athletes or lend a hand in running the many activities represented "the biggest crowd ever."

Among the 900 athletes competing were four Kendall students, who netted honors in track and field events: Keithlan Sproles won a gold medal in the 25-meter race and a silver medal in the tennis ball throw; Patrick Ridgell won a bronze medal in the softball throw and a silver medal in the standing long jump; Stacey Abraham won a gold medal in the 100-meter race and a silver medal in the standing long jump; and Travis Weisenberger won a silver medal in the standing long jump and a ribbon in the 100-meter race.

Abraham also won the $50 third prize in the Special Olympics poster contest, and Weisenberger was picked to carry the Special Olympics flag and lead the athletes to the field for the opening ceremony.

Another part of the opening ceremony was a torch run in which an estimated 1,000 law enforcement officers from 40 federal and local agencies—including Gallaudet's Department of Safety and Security—ran in stages through the city streets, carrying the Special Olympics torch from the Capitol steps to Hotchkiss Field to kick-off the games.

Besides the two days of athletic competitions, Olympics goers were exposed to a festival-like atmosphere at "Olympic Town," set up north of the playing field.

Olympic Town featured gymnastics acts, body building routines, and a demonstration by the D.C. Metropolitan Police force's canine corps. There were also clowns, a "moon bounce" apparatus, and T-shirt decorating.

The weekend also included guest appearances by actors Blair Underwood of the television series "L.A. Law" and "Wonder Woman" Linda Carter. World welterweight boxing champ Simon Brown was on hand to present awards to the athletes, as was former Redskin Pete Wysocky.

Drug and alcohol program set up

Gallaudet is establishing a new alcohol and drug education program through Student Affairs that will deal with students who experience chronic problems with drugs or alcohol.

Called Behavior Under the Influence, the program is based on recommendations from the Alcohol/Drug Task Force, composed of representatives of units in Student Affairs.

The program will include three educational sessions each semester, each session consisting of four three-hour meetings each week. The sessions will include films, group discussions, and guest speakers.

During the last meeting of each session, University Counseling Center staff will conduct an evaluation.

Task Force members are Hillel Goldberg, director of the University Center (chairman); Carl Pramuk, coordinator of the Judicial Program; Dwight Benedict, director of Student Life; Dr. Kathleen Peoples, director of the Counseling Center; and representatives from the Department of Safety and Security.

For more information, contact Goldberg at x5144.

Among Ourselves

The Office of the Provost announces that Professor Frances Parsons, formerly of the Art Department, has been assigned the position of curator of art and coordinator of national and international art exhibits. As an art historian, Parsons will work with the director of the Gallaudet Library to collect and disseminate materials and maintain a database on national and international deaf artists. She will also assist in developing national and international art exhibits for the University. Parsons has traveled extensively, is the author of I Didn't Hear the Dragon Roar, and is well-known for her contributions to the field of art history.

Dr. Kathleen Arnos, director of the Gallaudet Research Institute's Genetic Services Center, has been elected chairwoman of the Institutional Review Board for the Protection of Human Subjects. In order to satisfy federal regulatory requirements, this board must review all research projects that involve human subjects at Gallaudet. Arnos replaces Dr. Marita Danek, a professor in the Counseling Department, who served as chairwoman for the past two years. Other members of the board are: Dr. Linda Lytle, a psychotherapist in private practice; Dr. William Marshall, professor, Administration and Supervision; Sy DuBow, legal director, National Center for Law and the Deaf; Judith Lenard, evaluation utilization specialist, Curriculum and Evaluation; and Danek. Dr. Michael Karchmer, dean of Graduate Studies and Research, is an ex-officio member, and office services supervisor Sally Dunn coordinates board activities.

Will Verbits, a psychologist in MSSD's Department of Counseling and Development, was recently named a Nationally Certified School Psychologist (NCSP) by the National School Psychology Certification Board. The NCSP is conferred in recognition of professional training and experience, compliance with ethical standards, and compliance with the standards adopted by the National Association of School Psychologists, as well as successful completion of the National School Psychology Examination.

Three Gallaudet faculty members spoke this May at California State University, Northridge. Professor Gil Eastman of the Theatre Arts Department spoke about Visual Gestural Communication on May 6. Jerald Jordan, an instructor in the Department of Mathematics and Computer Science and president of the Comité International des Sports des Sourdes presented "International Sports and Deaf People" on May 8. Professor John Schuchman of the History Department spoke about his book Hollywood Speaks: Deafness and the Film Entertainment Industry on May 17.

Mary Gawlik, senior coordinator, and Joseph Mattivi, assistant coordinator, both of Experiential Programs Off Campus, presented "The Deaf Professional: Potential with a plus" at the Management Clinic of the National Restaurant Association's Annual Conference on May 22 in Chicago, Ill.

Dr. Fat Lam, associate professor of mathematics, attended the Mathematicians and Education Reform Network Workshop, sponsored by the National Science Foundation, at the University of California, Berkeley, May 4-7.
